Strengths of the course and of the instructor: -	A	• I really enjoyed taking this class because our professor was very engaging and managed to stay super optimistic starting from the transition to remote learning up until the last day of class. With regards to the in-person classes, the discussions were always good and he helped me to feel comfortable voicing out my ideas. I felt that I learnt a lot from him and I think I also improved as a writer and multimedia creator. Our professor was also very lenient which I appreciated especially during this time and made sure that he was accommodative of our needs. • He's very thoughtful and passionate about the course. He takes his time to thoroughly explain the readings and its significance. The course itself is very thought provoking in terms of the future and I really enjoyed it. • The course was planned very well even with the shift to online classes. This was by far the most enjoyable writing class I've taken because of professor Kokot and his very flexible scheduling. The readings were interesting and relevant to the course, and the required assignments were also pertinent to the course and helpful as a student/writer. • He was incredibly engaging to listen to! He was also very understanding about our lives and any potential issues we had, especially considering the situation with the coronavirus. • I really love this course since it gives me an insight about my topic of paper. I've always interested in philosophy AND science, and this course really does well in combining those two disciplines. The instructor has been really considerate and cared about students a lot. His explanation on philosophical concepts is neat and helpful. I also liked that he always encourages students to express and discuss their own thoughts. • Professor Kokot was always encouraged class participation in discussion without forcing students to speak if uncomfortable. His teaching style was helpful in promoting thought and reflection on important topics. I enjoyed his class much more than I thought I would enjoy a philosophy course. • The course covered a lot of topics, which I enjoyed. Professor was always prepared. He explained everything well and spent a good amount of time on each subject.

Weaknesses of the course and of the instructor: -	A	• Not entirely the professor fault because of COVID-19, but I wish there was more of a writing process for the research paper. I would have liked more notes on my assignments
		• I felt that some of the readings were a bit too dense to be covered thoroughly in the available class time.
		• I would say the only weakness of the course was outside of the professor's control. The shift to online classes slashed a lot of the multimedia content that was supposed to happen, much to his dismay. Beyond that, professor Kokot did a wonderful job assessing the situation and keeping the students on a nice timeline with the assignments.
		• None
		• Tended to be a lot of reading homework, and I think this could've been lessened in the sense that only important extracts from articles were assigned so there could be a narrower focus? (this is just a suggestion but doesn't have to be followed).

General Comments -	A	• Jordan is one of the most caring professors I've had. Thank you for a great sem and I wish you all the best.
		• I really enjoyed this class!
		• Overall I greatly enjoyed the course and found a new interest in philosophy that I did not expect.
		• Great class, I would recommend the class and professor to others
